Dying Is A Movement Inward

“Yet I was always in your presence; you were holding me by my right hand.”
Ps. 73, v.23

Dying is a movement inward, something natural and final, following a pattern of growth which moved outward from a point.

A Brazilian fan palm, open to sun, has such growth and pattern, its leaves clinging together even as it spreads out in beauty.

Such symmetry is of nature, it flows from what is within, bursting with beauty, nurtured by sunlight.

Human life has centeredness; the years cling together, making a beautiful pattern visible to those around.

God’s grace is such a power, forming us within our nature, binding what is good, in patterns, making a oneness of many parts.

Death is seen by us daily, part of the pattern of life; we remain focused on our center, what has bound us in one, remains.

Abbot Barnabas Senecal, O.S.B.
